ALLOVEME awarded for SOCIAL JUSTICE!

The So Cal Chapter of ASPA (American Society of Public Administration) honored ALLOVEME with the inaugural Estelle Lawton Lindsey Award for Social Justice. Nominated and presented by Tonia Reeves Jackson (l), ASPA SoCal VP of Programs. Tonia is pictured with Lori (c), Founder of ALLOVEME, and Julie Shroyer (r), President of ASPA So Cal Chapter. The Award was presented on June 7th at the California Endowment Center in Downtown Los Angeles.

“Women of all ages freely sharing their life experiences and being encouraged to become their best self.”

IMAGE & EMPOWERMENT CHATS ROCK ON ZOOM!

Ms. Pat's quote above tells us our virtual chats have been a real place of refuge, a place to talk and a place to bond with other women of color. We learn from each other, share our experience and gain respect from different perspectives.

AFTER THE CHATS...

IMAGE CHAT

“What I took away from today's meeting was, love myself right where I am, because most black women feel the same way. From our hair to job interviews, family trauma or not knowing our history for which why things are the way they are today and why we have insecurities built in.”

“Thinking more of how I see myself and how I want others to see me now in my life.”

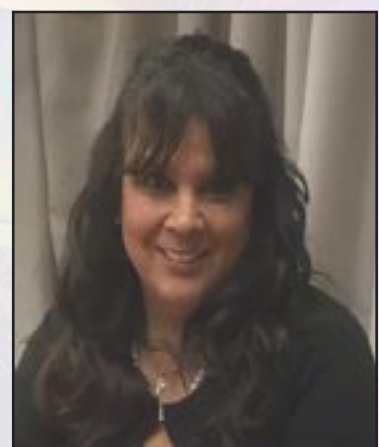

EMPOWERMENT CHAT

“We need to stand together, work together, we are one. Powerful words spoken”

“We, as women of color, need to support and uplift each other, also we are not alone.”

“We have different thoughts, opinions, and perspectives for various reasons. Family influence, negative or positive, is very strong.”
